Health Professions Educator Series – Earn faculty development related to teaching hours!

Health Professions Educator Series – Earn faculty development related to teaching hours! Please join us for this month's Health Professions Educator session, "Simple Techniques for Using Technology to Enhance Your Teaching" with David Halpin, PhD (Application Analyst, Jefferson College of Health Sciences). This session is scheduled for Monday, June 26, from 12noon – 1pm (CRMH 13th Floor Conference Room).

Learning with Laughter – Uncover the hilarious truth about medical education conferences!

An acceptance for a poster, presentation or (gasp) workshop at a local or national conference can lead to many initial emotions - excitement, stress, and confusion are among the many. The purpose and atmosphere of medical education conferences may seem cut and dry - a diverse and devoted gathering of reserved academics intended to promote networking and the sharing of ideas with the goal of advancing the field. However, the reality that befalls those in attendance is often far more complex and at many times humorous. Are Medical Educators alone is juggling the familial, social, and academic responsibilities at professional meetings? Where do all the snacks and endless caffeinated indulgences come from? Click here to read "From the Coliseum to the Convention Centre: A Reflection on the Current State of Medical Education Conferences and Conference-goers", a witty, hilarious, and revealing review of the modern medical education conference.
