DR. MERYL - Reviews to help reduce journal overload!

It is all too often that stacks of interesting, must read articles pile up on our desks. These dust-collecting articles may detail medical education research relevant to our daily work, an upcoming project, or just represent one of your vast areas of interest. A great resource to help reduce your article desk clutter is DR MERL. DR MERL's mission statement is "to provide pithy, timely reviews of medical education research which has practical impact on the decisions made by front line medical educators and course, clerkship, and program directors." They provide very brief (often 1 paragraph), reliable reviews of medical education research literature to help reduce your article load. Reviews from several of the top regarded medical education journals are included to help keep educators up to date with the most important medical education research. Click here to check-out some of the most recent DR MERL reviews.

Facebook – Like our TEACH page now!

You can now be a friend of TEACH on social media! In an effort to extend our community of practice into the virtual world we have created our own Facebook page to share important news and updates with our members!
